FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missile Center

BY MAJ. GEN. JOHN T. LEWIS, USA
Commanding General

WHEN Antiaircraft Artillery became officially a part of the U. S. Army in 1917 and a new field in the science of warfare was opened, it is doubtful if the antiaircraftman of that time realized that this service would become the all-embracing section of the Artillery that is represented at the Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missile Center at Fort Bliss, Tex., today.

Maj. Gen. Lewis

Radar, sky-sweepers, ram-jets, missiles, electronics—these names which are commonplace at this center of antiaircraft activities today would probably have been confusing to the artilleryman of 1917. Any "confusion" which might exist among military men in this field today is being dispelled at the Center through the research, testing and training being conducted by Army Field Forces Board No. 4, the Antiaircraft and Guided Missiles Branch of The Artillery School, the Antiaircraft Artillery Replacement Training Center and the 1st Guided Missiles Group.

The Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missile Center was activated at Fort Bliss in July 1946, with Major General John L. Homer, now retired, as the first Commanding General. Units under the Center were Army Field Forces Board No. 4, the Antiaircraft Artillery School, 1st Guided Missile Battalion and a handful of General Reserve Antiaircraft Artillery units at the post.

The present high state of activity at Fort Bliss began during the latter part of 1948, when an expansion of antiaircraft artillery was directed by the Department of the Army. The number of units at Fort Bliss were increased in a short time from one group and two battalions to three brigades, nine groups and forty battalions. After these units had received antiaircraft training, and a number of them had moved to new posts for permanent station assignments, there was a temporary lull at Fort Bliss. This lull was broken during the latter part of 1950 by the expansion of the Army, the assignment of a number of Federalized National Guard units to the post, and the re-establishment of the Antiaircraft Artillery Replacement Training Center.

Direction and coordination of the various activities, and administration, housing, and training of units assigned to Fort

Gen. Marshall Sees Situation Worsening

At a conference 27 March Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall told the press that he considered the present world situation worse than it was last November and December, when United Nations troops were suffering serious reverses in Korea. He declined to amplify his statement or to give his reasons for this pessimistic attitude.

However, the Secretary said, that the Korean peninsula, where the situation has materially improved, is a relatively small area, while Soviet activities are world-wide.

Secretary Marshall was obviously disturbed over the possibility that crippling amendments might be added to the Universal Military Service and Training Bill which comes up for debate in the House of Representatives next week. He expressed astonishment at the abrupt change of sentiment on the part of the public and many members of Congress, that had taken place in the last six weeks.

The Secretary said that last November and December when he appeared before the appropriate Congressional committees he was told by many members of Congress that the Defense Department was not doing enough to bring about a mobilization of the nation's manpower. Some wanted to go so far as to organize 100 divisions.

At that time the Secretary said he warned that sentiment would change whenever the urgent need did not appear to be so great, but he did not expect such a complete change, at least not before 1952, or at the earliest before next September. He said he never dreamed that such a change, which he attributed to Allied victories in Korea, would occur so soon.

The Secretary said that the pending manpower bill is essential, not only to provide for an immediate buildup of our forces, but also, and more important, to provide for an enduring program of national defense. He said international tension required a long period of military preparation. However, he added, even before the program is started there has been a public relaxation.

It is of monumental importance, the Secretary said, that the mountains and valleys in the program for national defense be avoided. He strongly advocated orderly progress toward a satisfactory defense posture of the nation. If we grow negligent and careless of our national security, he said, we cannot hope to attain this goal.

The passage of the pending manpower bill, the Secretary said, will enable the Defense Department to relieve members of the reserves now on active duty, especially those called involuntarily to duty, and still have enough available manpower to maintain respectable forces. Further, he said it would enable the

USAF Selects 1,110 Officers for Permanent Captain

The Air Force announced yesterday, 30 March, the names of 1,110 officers approved by The President for inclusion on Air Force recommended lists for permanent promotion to the grade of Captain.

The officers were recommended by a USAF Central Selection Board, which reviewed the records of 1,127 eligible officers in making its selections. Selections were made on a fully qualified basis from among those permanent grade first lieutenants who complete seven years of promotion list service prior to 1 July 1952. Actual promotions will be made as the officers complete such service.

The full list of captains selected begins on Page 848 of this issue. Also beginning on Page 847, THE JOURNAL publishes a list of air officers previously selected for permanent advancement who were nominated this week for actual promotion.

482 Marines Selected

The President this week approved the selection of 482 Marine Corps officers for temporary promotion to the rank of captain. Included were 16 limited duty only officers; the remainder are unrestricted.

Thirteen of the officers were selected from above the promotion zone, 453 from within the zone, and none from below. Sixty-four officers were passed over.

The selection board, headed by Col. Harold O. Deakin, was authorized to select 16 limited duty officers, there were 16 in the zone and all were selected.

Army Discloses New Policy on Promotions

The Army yesterday, 30 March, announced its new temporary promotion policy affecting all officers—Regulars, Reserve, and National Guard—on active duty and set Monday, 2 April as the convening date for the first selection board under the revised system.

The first board to meet will consider officers for advancement to the temporary rank of Colonel and subsequently other boards will meet "as early as practical."

Hundreds of promotions to the ranks of Captain, Major, Lt. Colonel, and Colonel are expected to be made following formulation of the new policy.

Fundamentally, the new promotion policy, in contrast to the one used in making temporary promotions since outbreak of war in Korea and the consequent expansion program, will give greater weight to temporary date of rank and will rely more heavily on the "best qualified" method of selection instead of the "fully qualified" method.

What this will mean is that a given selection board will have relatively more names to consider in making recommendations for promotion. Generally, zones of consideration will be deeper and consequently stiffer selection procedures will result.

To a limit of five per cent, selection boards also will be authorized to name for temporary promotion officers who are below the announced zone of consideration. This applies equally to Regular Army, National Guard, and Reserve Corps officers on active duty.

The Army's announcement stated that "this enables selection boards to recognize competence wherever found."

And accelerated promotion of certain outstanding second lieutenants will result from the directive, which declares that some officers may be named for advancement to first lieutenants after nine months' service. The normal time for promotion to first lieutenant will remain, however, at eighteen months.

Following is the complete text of the Army's statement as released yesterday:

Text of Statement

"Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., today announced new temporary promotion policies and promotion zones for the selection of additional officers for temporary promotions to meet requirements due to the expansion of the Army.

"The new system provides that officers will be considered for promotion in the order of their dates of rank in the grade in which serving on active duty regardless of their component, whether National Guard, Reserve, or Regular. Previously, Regular officers were considered in order of permanent dates of rank only, and the number of officers to be considered was divided between Regular and Reserve officers, in direct proportion to the numbers of each serving in the grade on active duty. This division is now removed.

"A significant feature is that the selection board is authorized to select from the Regular Army, National Guard, and the Reserve

The News, Newport, R. I.—"There is no real assurance . . . that Russia will not attack in 1951. The 'high brass' in the Pentagon that believes Russia will not make war this year or in the immediate future concedes that some 'accident' might precipitate hostilities, almost at any moment. But our atomic bombs, and our ability to drop them on places where they would do the most damage to Russia seems the main reason to believe the Politburo will continue to keep the current war cold, rather than turn it hot."

New York Herald Tribune—"It is heartening . . . to see 'The Economist' of London, . . . taking issue with the point of view that Red China 'has been more sinned against than sinning.' The United Nations, it emphasizes, is a political organization which must consider the consequences of its actions; it cannot be 'a blind arbitrator,' passing judgment though the heavens fall. But the moral and legal position is clear: 'The Communists—whether North Korean, Chinese or Russian—have put themselves in the wrong; there have been no breaches of trust by the Americans or by anybody else on the United Nations side.' That is the record, and it is worth restating now, when new political decisions over Korea are in the making."

The Baltimore Sun—"It is no wonder that General Marshall is disturbed today as he sees Congress and the public again relaxing in response to the news that the United Nations forces again are back at the Thirty-eighth Parallel. Yet who knows but that some unforeseen circumstances may in a single day reverse the Korean situation as it has reversed several times already? . . . Since it (the international situation) is a long-term affair, obviously our basic defense policy cannot be altered to match the day-to-day developments in the news. Obviously it must be continuous and consistent."

New York Times—"There has often been a tendency in this country to discount the qualities of those who are unknown to us. What we need to know is that a Korean, or a Chinese, or a Filipino can be brave and strong and devoted no less than any other man. Those who have fought with them already know this, but this knowledge has not always been adequately passed along. We are now free men together and it behooves us to cultivate the qualities of mutual confidence and respect. The esteem that the valiant South Koreans are winning is an important part of our lesson."

THE WAR IN KOREA

THE South Korean Capital Division on the east coast of Korea this week advanced several miles into enemy-held North Korea and captured the town of Yangyang and several small villages. The advance in this sector was supported by naval gunfire from American destroyers.

Elsewhere in Korea United Nations troops have cleared the enemy out of practically all of South Korea, with the exception of a narrow strip from two to twelve miles wide just south of the controversial 38th parallel, dividing North and South Korea. One Chinese Red division opposing the Allied advance on the western front northeast of Seoul was cut to pieces.

During much of this week continuous rain impeded military operations and materially reduced the air effort in support of ground troops. Nevertheless elements of several Allied divisions advanced through the mud, and in sharp fighting took a heavy toll of the enemy, pushing the Reds back to their main line of resistance along the parallel.

American paratroopers who made a surprise drop in the vicinity of Munsan, north of Seoul, late last week, consolidated their gains and with supporting troops moved laterally to the east to effect a junction with an armored and infantry column north of Uijongbu.

Strong Force Eliminated

To the north of Uijongbu a strong enemy force was encountered and eliminated after a hard fight. A Communist regiment was routed, leaving 350 dead. Farther east in the same sector three enemy battalions were surrounded and cut to pieces, the survivors fleeing into the hills. In this series of encounters a Chinese Red division was practically eliminated as an effective fighting force.

In other parts of the front Red resistance, for the most part, was light and scattered. South Korean troops engaged a small enemy force west of Chunchon, but after a brief fire fight the enemy broke contact and withdrew to the north. Aggressive Allied patrols probing north of Chunchon ran into small enemy groups which fought unimportant delaying actions. Other enemy units at various parts of the front were easily dispersed by the advancing Allies.

Intelligence reports indicate a heavy buildup of enemy forces in strong defensive positions just north of the 38th parallel. The enemy took advantage of the adverse weather, which hindered air observation and attacks, to bring south from Manchuria large numbers of reinforcements and large amounts of supplies. When there was a break in the weather air observers reported heavy vehicular movements on the main highways leading to the front.

It is estimated that six Chinese armies, which correspond to American army corps, are deployed in depth in this area. Organized defensive positions along the 38th parallel, which were prepared by the North Korean army prior to the war, are occupied by the Reds and are being strengthened.

If the Reds are able to hold this line they will be able to regroup their battered forces and fill up their depleted ranks, possibly in preparation for a new Communist offensive. At present the enemy capability of mounting a new offensive is much less than it was a few weeks ago. However, if Allied forces are held south of the parallel the enemy will be given an essential period in which to recuperate and prepare for further offensive operations.

Last weekend General Douglas MacArthur, Commander-in-Chief of the United Nations Forces, visited the Korean front for the fourteenth time since the war began. Just prior to leaving his Tokyo headquarters for the front General MacArthur issued a statement, calling upon the commander of the Red forces in Korea to meet him and discuss terms for ending the Korean conflict.

Gen. MacArthur At Front

The general pointed out that the Communists could not hope to achieve their announced object of driving the United Nations troops from Korea. He said that Red China lacked the means for carrying on a prolonged war. He called attention to the disastrous consequences to the Reds of possible Allied attacks by sea and air on their bases and coastal areas.

While General MacArthur made it clear that terms for ending the war must conform to those laid down by the United Nations, which was responsible for all political decisions, his statement aroused a great deal of concern in diplomatic circles, particularly in Washington, London and Paris, and at Lake Success. The American State Department was quick to declare that the MacArthur statement had not been cleared with Washington, and to emphasize that the general as military commander had no authority to make political decisions.

In his Tokyo statement General MacArthur said that he was "ready at any time to confer with the commander-in-chief of the enemy forces in the earnest effort" to settle the war "without further bloodshed." The general said the Chinese had been hard hit and their supply lines wrecked. He added this statement, which immediately aroused Allied concern:

"The enemy must by now be painfully aware that a decision of the United Nations to depart from its tolerant effort to confine the war to the area of Korea, through an expansion of our military operations to his coastal areas and military bases, would doom Red China to the risk of imminent military collapse. . . ."

"We have now substantially cleared South Korea of organized Communist forces. . . . It is becoming increasingly evident that the heavy destruction along the enemy lines of supply, caused by our around-the-clock massive air and naval bombardment, has crippled the enemy. . . . This weakness is being brilliantly exploited by our ground forces."

Comments on Reds

General MacArthur observed that Chinese troops are "showing less stamina" than United Nations forces "under the rigors of climate, terrain, and battle." He commented that Red China lacks the industrial capacity to build a modern military machine. He pointed out that United Nations control of the air and the sea gives the Allies control of supplies, communications and transportation, adding:

"The resultant disparity is such that it cannot be overcome by bravery, however fantastic, or the most gross indifference to human loss."

Once Red China realizes that she cannot hope to withstand an attack by the United Nations, the general said, there should be no "difficulty in arriving at decisions on the Korean problem." Continuing he said:

"The Korean nation and people, which have been so cruelly ravaged, must not be sacrificed. Apart from the military area of the problem, where issues are resolved in the course of combat, the fundamental questions continue to be diplomatic in nature and must find their answer in the diplomatic sphere."

At General MacArthur's headquarters in Japan great surprise was expressed that any exception should have been taken to this statement in diplomatic circles. The statement, it was said, was issued largely for its psychological effect on enemy troops. It was broadcast to the enemy and many thousands of copies, translated into Chinese and Korean, were dropped in enemy territory. However, reports persisted that Allied foreign ministers were gravely disturbed by the political implications of the statement. It is reported, without confirmation, that General MacArthur has now been requested to clear all future political statements with Washington.

At a press conference in Washington Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall declined to discuss this incident. However, he stated that General MacArthur was at liberty to cross the 38th parallel to maintain contact with the enemy, to the extent necessary to insure the security of the United Nations forces. This might necessitate the crossing of the parallel in considerable force, but would not require the Allied troops to advance all the way to the Manchurian border at the Yalu River. Such a major operation, the Secretary indicated, was a political matter for decision by the United Nations.

Red Radio Reacts

The official Red Chinese radio at Peiping called the MacArthur statement a bluff and an insult to the people of China and Korea and flatly rejected the offer of a conference to end the war. The broadcast said that the announcement of General MacArthur was proof that the United States and Great Britain were planning an invasion of China.

The United States Heavy Cruiser St. Paul, which spent several weeks bombarding enemy shore positions on the west coast of Korea, this week transferred its activities to the east coast. With the U. S. Destroyer-Minesweeper Carmick the St. Paul fired on enemy positions near Chongwin on the extreme northeast coast. Roads and bridges, which had been repaired after having been previously damaged by sea and air bombardment, were again taken under fire.

Other Allied naval surface units continued to deny the enemy the use of the east coast transportation system, maintaining a close sea blockade of the coast, and blasting rail facilities at Chongjin, Songjin and Wonsan.

A destroyer force, including the USS Massey, provided a rolling barrage for advancing South Korean troops of the Capital Division along the east coast highway near the 38th parallel. Destroyer guns pinned down the North Korean Reds, while the South Koreans took new positions. Enemy troop concentrations were pounded and dispersed, with the Reds fleeing to the hills. As a result the Capital Division met with only light resistance as it crossed the parallel.

The British Destroyer Comus successfully bombarded enemy positions on the Korean west coast opposite Cho Island. Fifteen direct hits were scored on one shore battery.

Despite unusually heavy weather, rain and fog, Navy and Marine planes flew as many sorties this week as possible, though activity was reduced, and atmospheric conditions made it extremely difficult to observe results of air attacks.

Carrier Planes Active

Planes from the heavy American carriers of Naval Task Force 77 off the east coast devoted most of their efforts this week to close support of ground troops advancing through the mud near the 38th parallel. Controllers directing the attack reported excellent coverage of enemy troop concentrations and mortar and automatic weapons positions.

Fighting bad weather on the west coast Sea Furies and Fireflies from the British Light Carrier Theseus provided close and deep support of ground forces in the western sector. Numerous large buildings holding troops and supplies were destroyed or damaged, and a train concealed in a tunnel was hit with rockets. Large secondary explosions were set off as a result of an attack on an enemy-occupied village.

Poor weather and low visibility reduced the activities of the Far East Air Force during the week, but failed to ground all planes, even on the worst days. About half the usual number of sorties was flown each rainy day, and the effort was greatly accelerated whenever the weather cleared.

Heavy air attacks were made on enemy forward and rear positions in support of ground troops. The isolation of the battle area from enemy sources of resupply and reinforcement was a prime objective of the air operations. Air drops of supplies to advance elements of United Nations forces helped solve the logistical problem created by rains that turned roads into quagmires, greatly hampering the movement of highway transport.

Radar Bombing

All-weather B-29 Superforts from Okinawa continued their round-the-clock interdiction attacks on enemy supply routes. Bombing through heavy clouds was conducted by radar aiming technique. Heavy tonnages of high explosives were dropped on supply and transportation facilities in Pyongyang, Chaho, Hamhung, and Wonsan. Night strikes were made on military installations at Haeju and Chorwon.

Shooting Star jets and Mustang fighters attacked troop concentrations and supply areas, inflicting heavy casualties, and knocking out numerous buildings, vehicles and gun emplacements.

Allied fighter-bombers struck transportation installations and facilities, damaging 17 tunnels, five railroad bridges, sections of tracks and two trains. A heavy vehicular movement on the west coast was attacked.

Several tanks were destroyed or damaged directly behind the Communist front lines near Chorwon and Kumwha in Central Korea. The heaviest vehicular movement in two weeks was observed at night by B-26 light bombers. About 850 vehicles were sighted, of which 600 were moving south in the western section. All were brought under air attack.

Army Officer Expansion To Add 24,150 by 1 July

Following an early March announcement that it would recall 12,650 company grade officers from the Organized Reserve Corps and National Guard to active service beginning 23 May, the Army has reported it will summon to service 1500 field grade officers by 29 June and during the summer will bring on active duty about 10,000 ROTC graduates.

Coincidental with this build-up of officer strength, the Army cut its April draft call from 80,000 to 40,000 and explained that this was made possible by a net gain of 26,000 enlistments over previous forecasts and a fortunate 16,000 reduction in the estimated casualties in Korea.

Meantime, a program to enlist 2,500 carefully selected male aliens into the Army has been inaugurated in the U. S. Zone of Occupation in Germany.

Here are the details on these latest manpower developments.

Field Grade Recall

The recall of field grade officers will affect ORC and National Guard officers of Infantry, Armor, Artillery, Signal Corps, Engineer Corps and Chemical Corps, including 100 majors and 400 lieutenant colonels. It was stated that no member of the Inactive Reserve and no individual National Guard officer will be ordered to active service unless he volunteers.

Officers will be selected for active service in the following priorities:

Priority I: Qualified volunteers of the Organized Reserve Corps, and of the National Guard.

Priority II: Members of the Volunteer Reserve.

Preference will be given to officers who consent to be ordered to active duty and who have served on active duty for at least six months in the grade now held in the Reserve or National Guard, provided they meet the requirements by branch, grade, and specialty.

Officers will be ordered into active service for a period of 21 consecutive months or such other period as may be authorized by law, unless sooner relieved.

The Army stated that officers with four or more dependents (wife, children or dependent parents) will not be ordered into active service if they request exemption because of hardship.

Officers who are drawing pensions, disability allowances, or disability compensation from the Government may be selected and ordered into active military service provided they are otherwise qualified.

Draft Cut

The cut in the April draft call, the Army said, will not interfere with the attainment of the required strength in accordance with the schedule planned by the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The speed of expansion is necessarily limited by the availability of training facilities, equipment, clothing and experienced personnel to carry on the training.

Because of the factors mentioned above if the full Selective Service call for April were allowed to stand, the Army's rate of growth would exceed previously planned levels and would overtax these training facilities, with a resulting decline in efficiency and troop morale. The April call permits continued orderly progress in building up the military establishment at the most rapid practicable rate.

The Army gave assurance that the revision in its April Selective Service call would have no adverse effect on the development of plans for release of involuntary Reservists at the earliest practicable date.

The shift in the April Selective Service goal does not materially affect the statistics the Department of Defense submitted to Congress in connection with the Universal Military Training and Service program. New enlistments represent reductions in the pool of men available for call through Selective Service and leave the basic manpower estimates unchanged.

In addition to its inductions through Selective Service, the Army plans to call to active duty during April 5,516 officers and enlisted men in National Guard units and 815 officers and enlisted men in Organized Reserve units. These units are urgently needed to fulfill the Army's requirement for a balanced force. They represent units for which the active Army cannot provide adequate cadres.

Enlistment of Aliens

Instructions issued to the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Army in Europe will bring non-resident foreign nationals into the United States Army for the first time in its history. The Army directive was issued to implement the authority granted the Secretary of the Army by Public Law 597, 81st Congress (the Lodge Act).

Eligibility for enlistment under this program is restricted to male aliens, between the ages of 18 and 35, who apply for enlistment within the United States occupied area of Germany, and who meet stringent requirements to insure their reliability. All will be thoroughly investigated before acceptance.

Immediately following enlistment, the enlistees will be transferred to the United States for completion of reception, processing, basic training, and integration as individuals into established units.

ROTC Call Details

Its announcement forecast in recent issues of THE JOURNAL, the call for ROTC graduates will add 10,000 second lieutenants during July, August and September.

It is planned to order into the active military service those who are members of the Organized Reserve Corps commissioned from the ROTC who were deferred from Selective Service under an ROTC deferment agreement. Also to be ordered to active duty are those members of the Organized Reserve Corps commissioned from the ROTC who did not execute an ROTC deferment agreement and who have had less than two years' prior active federal service as officers, warrant officers, or enlisted men. These students may volunteer for immediate service upon graduation if they so desire.

The newly commissioned officers will be ordered to their basic branch service school for approximately 90 days upon entering active military service.

Quarters Allowance Policy

The text of the Department of Defense Personnel Policy Board statement regarding payment of basic allowances for quarters under various circumstances of marriage has been released and is published herewith.

1. Marriages where both parties concerned are members of the uniformed services with no other dependents and are stationed at the same or adjacent posts or installations:

a. Male enlisted—female enlisted: Eligibility for assignment to married quarters, or to payment of "single" basic allowance for quarters in lieu thereof, rests with the male member. Female member has no entitlement: (1) to married quarters, nor (2) to "single" quarters allowance unless single quarters are not available for assignment to her.

b. Male officer—female officer: Eligibility for assignment to married quarters, or to payment of "single" basic allowance for quarters in lieu thereof, rests with the male member. Female member has no entitlement: (1) to married quarters, nor (2) to "single" quarters allowance unless single quarters are not available for assignment to her.

c. Male enlisted—female officer, or vice versa: Assignment to married quarters under these circumstances is presumed to be embarrassing to the personnel concerned and it is not considered to be in the best interest of the services. Accordingly, such assignments will not be made. In lieu thereof, certification will be provided for the male member to the effect that "no suitable married quarters are available," and entitlement will be established for payment of "single" basic allowance for quarters. Female member has no entitlement: (1) to married quarters, nor (2) to "single" quarters allowance unless single quarters are not available for assignment to her.

2. Marriages where both parties concerned are members of the uniformed services with no other dependents and where such parties are precluded by distance from living together: In such cases both parties concerned are to be considered as members without dependents.

3. Marriages where both parties concerned are members of the uniformed services and either or both have dependents other than spouse. In all cases, entitlement to married quarters rests with either or both and either or both may be entitled to basic allowance for quarters provided for members with dependents when not assigned quarters, depending on dependency status of each of the members.

4. Marriages where only one party is a member of the uniformed services, and there are no other dependents: With respect to female members married to civilian husbands, the law does not recognize the husband as a dependent unless he is in fact dependent upon the female member for more than one-half support. Therefore, the female member would be considered as a member without dependents for the purpose of assignment to quarters and entitlement to basic allowance for quarters unless she has established that her husband is a dependent as defined in Section 102(g) of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, as amended. Policies governing male members married to civilians are clearly established in existing regulations.

5. Marriages where only one party is a member of the uniformed services and such member has dependents other than spouse: Policies governing such cases are established and covered in existing regulations.

6. This policy shall include members in grades E-4 with less than seven (7) years' service, E-3, E-2, and E-1 until the termination or repeal of the Dependents' Assistance Act of 1950 (30 Apr. 1953).

Delay Combat Pay Hearings

Inability to get enough members for a quorum of the Senate Armed Services Committee during the Easter holidays, forced postponement this week of the scheduled opening of hearings on combat pay. Present plans call for beginning the hearings next week.

Meanwhile it has been decided to appoint a subcommittee to hold hearings on the bill to establish a personnel strength for the Marine Corps and to make its commandant a permanent member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Also up for early consideration by the Senate Committee is the House-approved Air Force Organization Act. This measure was not requested by the Air Force, but members of the House Committee felt that it should set limits for the new organization instead of giving it full flexibility in working out its own structure.

DISEASE TOLL

During the Spanish-American war, 13 American soldiers died of disease for every one killed in battle. In the European Theater, during World War II, the ratio was one soldier death by disease for every 85 killed in battle.

Army Denies War Service Scores Used in Promoting

For what is believed to be the first time, Army officials this week disclosed some information concerning the War Service Score contained in the records of Regular officers.

Prompted by letters from officers who, on examining their record files in The Adjutant General's office in the Pentagon, had discovered the mysterious War Service Scores thereon, THE JOURNAL posed a series of questions to Army officials regarding the War Service Score.

That such an evaluation has been placed in the personnel file of Regular Army officers has never been announced officially. The presumption is that hundreds of officers are not aware of the fact that there is such a score in their records.

In response to queries put by THE JOURNAL, the Army made the following statement:

"The War Service Score is a numerical evaluation of a Regular Army officer's duty performance during the calendar years 1937-46 inclusive, with major weight given to the years 1942-1945 inclusive.

"The computation was initiated and completed after World War II based on all available personnel records. The scores were generally based on manner of performance and the degree of responsibility of the duties performed.

"A score was awarded Regular Army officers of all grades.

"The War Service Score is not used in selecting officers for promotion."

The identity of members of the board which made out the War Service Score ratings has never been disclosed and officials stated this week that many details surrounding the work of this board have been put in a "classified" category.

The Army's statement that the War Service Score has no bearing on selection of officers for promotion was not expanded to include an explanation of what purpose, if any, the evaluation serves.

It is difficult to understand, however, how the War Service Score, being part of an officer's individual official record, can fail to influence members of a selection board, particularly in advancements to higher ranks where selection for promotion is extremely stiff as probably will be the case in forthcoming "best qualified" selections.

Pressed for a more detailed explanation, Army officials reiterated that the War Service Score is not a factor in promotion selection. They added also it has no importance in the matter of assignments.

One letter published in the 10 March issue—subsequently other communications have been received on this subject—speculated that "unless an officer recently examined his efficiency reports in The Adjutant General's office he is quite probably unaware that there is such a thing as a War Service Score."

From the reluctance of the Army to discuss this matter, and as result of the fact that no public statement was ever made regarding the War Service Score prior to this week's brief answer to our inquiries, it is believed that many officers are, indeed, unaware of the existence of this evaluation.

Overseas Assignment

The Marine Corps has released new instructions regarding the assignment of enlisted personnel to sea and foreign service.

Under the new directive, only those personnel with no prior sea or foreign service, or those who have completed six months' duty within the United States since their last return from such duty, are eligible for assignment to sea or foreign service.

The period of duty for those personnel who were last returned to the United States in a hospitalized status will be computed from the date of their return to full duty, the Marine Corps said. Periods of temporary or temporary additional duty beyond the continental limits of the United States shall not be considered as a sea or foreign service assignment.

Travel Pay In Advance

Army personnel now can draw individual travel and transportation allowances in advance and two new special regulations, issued this week, outline the procedure.

SR 35-3100-2, dated 13 March, explains how funds may be advanced for temporary duty travel expenses. SR 35-3100-3, also dated 13 March, tells how advance payments may be made to those on permanent changes of station.

The advances will be made for travel of service members only. They will not be made for transportation of dependents or movement of household goods.

Persons receiving orders to travel for the purpose of temporary duty can secure advance payments from authorized finance officers by applying on Standard Form 1038. For those permanently changing station, DD Form 114 (Military Pay Order) is the form to be used.

Advances for those assigned to temporary duty may be either in the form of monetary allowance in lieu of transportation as prescribed in Joint Travel Regulations or as per diem inside the United States. Outside the U. S., the actual cost of transportation also may be the basis for the advance, if transportation requests are not available.

A maximum of 45 days' per diem money may be advanced to those going on temporary duty status.

On a permanent change of station, 30 days' is the maximum per diem advance allowed. If the travel is outside the United States and transportation requests are not available, actual cost of transportation and a maximum of 30 days' per diem are authorized.

In cases of either permanent change of station or temporary duty, the borrower is expected normally to settle his account with his disbursing officer after completion of travel and before the next pay day. If it turns out he has more money coming than had been advanced to him, he gets it—or, if he has been overpaid for transportation, he is refunded the amount of overpayment.

Heads Mission to Iran

Assignment of Maj. Gen. Wayne C. Zimmerman, USA, as Chief of the United States Military Mission with the Iranian Army at Teheran was announced late last week.

He will relieve Maj. Gen. Vernon Evans, USA, who has been Chief of the Military Mission and Advisory Group since 1948. General Evans' new assignment has not yet been determined.

New President for M.P. Board

Col. Franklin W. Reese, MPC, who has served as President of the Military Police Board, Camp Gordon, Ga., since June 1949, will leave that assignment in the near future to become Provost Marshal of Fort Knox, Ky.

Succeeding Colonel Reese as President of the Board will be Col. Ralph J. Schuetz, MPC, who is scheduled to return soon after three years in the European Command, where he has been Commanding Officer of the 382d Military Police Service Battalion and Provost Marshal of the Bremerhaven Port of Embarkation.

Authorize 3,000 New W.O.'s

The Army disclosed this week that its major commanders and chiefs of the technical and administrative services have been authorized to make a total of 3,000 temporary warrant officer appointments.

No breakdown of quotas was released. The Army said that priority will be given to the filling of authorized vacancies and added that the "new appointments will not exceed the overall authorized warrant officer strength."

At the present time, officials reported, the Army has approximately 9,000 warrant officers.

The addition of 3,000 warrant officers, junior grade, even under the present severe restrictions on the number of warrant officers in the W-4 and W-3 categories, will doubtless result in some promotions being made to the top two warrant grades.

Since last June, in an order issued by the Department of Defense just prior to outbreak of war in Korea, the Services have been restricted arbitrarily to 3 per cent of warrant officer strength in the W-4 category and 7 per cent in W-3. Legislation has been introduced by Representative Pat Sutton (D-Tenn.) to force the Services to increase the number of warrant officers in the top grades and the Department of Defense has stated that it wants to make it possible for every qualified warrant officer to reach W-4 prior to retirement—an ambition which the Department of Defense has yet to spell out in necessary legislation.

Meantime, THE JOURNAL was told this week that of the 9,000 warrant officers in the Army, approximately 195 are in the W-4 classification and 455 in the W-3 pay grade. This shows that actually the 3 and 7 per cent limitations have not been reached.

Pay After CM Discharge

The Comptroller General in decision B-96411, has ruled that when a court martial sentence is voided personnel discharged before the voiding and allowed to return to duty are entitled "to the pay appropriate to his rank for the period between the date of discharge and the date of returning to duty." The official digest of the decision, rendered in the case of Emmet O. Tucker, U. S. Armv. follows:

"Under the Articles of War a special court martial may sentence a soldier to a bad conduct discharge but the sentence must be reviewed by a Board of Review and the Judge Advocate General before it legally may be executed, so that a soldier who was so sentenced for an absence without leave in violation of Article of War 61 and discharged prior to vacation of the sentence by the reviewing authorities, which vacation made the discharge void, and who was given the right to elect either to return to duty in an honorable status or to be furnished a general discharge for the convenience of the Government, is entitled, upon returning to duty, to the pay appropriate to his rank for the period between the date of discharge and the date of returning to duty."

Study Army Pay System

A six-man committee appointed by Maj. Gen. Eugene M. Foster, USA, Chief of Finance, is taking a thorough look at the Army's pay system, with the idea of further streamlining it, if possible.

The committee began its sessions 26 March, in the Office of the Chief of Finance, in Washington, D. C.

To insure ample consideration of problems encountered in the field, the committee includes four Finance Corps officers from outside the Washington area.

In addition, the group intends to visit several finance offices in the country, to discuss special problems or techniques of those offices, it was explained by Col. James E. Allen of the Philadelphia Finance Office, U. S. A., who is committee chairman.

Others on the committee are: Lt. Col. Clyde L. Martin, from Hq., Camp Polk, La., who recently served in combat as Finance Officer, 1st Cavalry Division in Korea; Lt. Col. Howard G. Ledgerwood of the Military Pay Division, Army Finance Center, St. Louis, Mo.; Capt. Paul D. Scribner and Capt. Donald S. Spaulding, both of the Office, Chief of Finance, and CWO Robert G. Lewis of the Finance Office, 82nd Airborne Division, Ft. Bragg, N. C.

The Chief of Finance's Management Division is assisting the committee, which began its work this week by studying previous pay system surveys and receiving briefings from appropriate authorities.

The military pay system currently used by the Army was initiated on 1 July 1949 after considerable study by the Office, Chief of Finance, in coordination with other Army agencies, the Navy and the Air Force.

The aim was to eliminate undesirable features of the former system, and particularly to tighten internal controls. In addition, the Finance Corps sought to answer the need of the Defense Department for a uniform pay system for all military departments. This objective in large measure was achieved.

Now, after 18 months of operations under varied circumstances, including combat conditions, the committee is completely reviewing the system in the light of experience gained.

Two objectives of the group are to insure that adequate controls exist and that the system is simplified to the maximum extent.

To Command Sub Force

Rear Adm. Charles B. Momsen will take command of the Navy's Submarine Force in the Pacific in May, the Navy announced this week. He will relieve Rear Adm. John H. Brown, Jr., who will become Commandant of the Fourth Naval District, relieving Rear Adm. Roscoe E. Schuirmann who will retire on 30 June.

Admiral Momsen was born in Flushing, N. Y., on 21 June 1896, is currently serving as Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Undersea Warfare and Acting ACNO, Fleet Readiness. A 1919 graduate of the Naval Academy, he entered submarine school at New London, Conn., in 1921, and subsequently served aboard and commanded a number of submarines.

Instrumental, along with others, in perfecting the invention of a submarine escape device known as the "Momsen Lung," he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

During World War II, he served as Commander of two different submarine squadrons in the Pacific, as well as a Coordinated Attack Group of Submarines. For his contribution to submarine warfare during this period, he was awarded the Navy Cross, the Legion of Merit and a Gold Star in lieu of a Second Legion of Merit. The citation for the Navy Cross reads in part, Admiral Momsen "evolved a doctrine of attack whereby submarines could be organized into an attack group capable of operating deep in enemy-controlled waters while maintaining full striking power."

In 1944, Admiral Momsen took command of the battleship USS South Dakota and while in command supported the assault operations on Okinawa. He has been ACNO for Undersea Warfare since May 1948.

Rear Adm. William M. Callaghan, Commander of the Military Sea Transport Service since its formation in September 1949, was nominated by the President this week to be a Vice Admiral while serving in that post.

Rear Adm. Callaghan

A 1918 graduate of the Naval Academy, he served overseas with the Navy's Destroyer Force during World War I. Following the war's end he served aboard numerous destroyers before assignment to the electrical engineering course at the Postgraduate School, and later earned the degree of Master of Science at Columbia University.

Admiral Callaghan, who is the eighth officer to be promoted to Vice Admiral since the beginning of the Korean conflict, served on the staff of the Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet during the early years of World War II. In 1944, he returned to the United States to fit out the battleship Missouri, which he commanded from her commissioning in June of that year until May 1945. He was subsequently Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Transportation, Chief of the Naval Transportation Service, and Commander, Training Command, Atlantic Fleet, before his present assignment.

Marine NCO Promotions

A Marine Corps selection board to pick sergeants for promotion to staff sergeant was convened this week at Marine Corps Headquarters.

A second board, to meet on 2 April, will name staff and technical sergeants for promotion to the next higher grade.

In making the announcement, the Corps said the boards will screen the largest number of NCO's ever considered. Approximately 5,000 sergeants are being considered for promotion to staff, and five to six thousand staff and technical sergeants will be considered for promotion to tech or master.

Sergeants who have completed two years in grade and who have passed the required written examinations, or for whom examinations have been waived because of membership in organizations committed to combat, are eligible for consideration by the board now in session.

Eligibility requirements for the staff NCO's are the same as for sergeants, although examinations differ according to rank and occupational specialty.

Each board is expected to complete its selection in five to six weeks from its convening date.

Marine Reserve Awards

Two Southern state Marine Reserve units have been designated to receive the "Pete" Ross Safety Trophy and the Marine Air Reserve Trophy.

Marine Air Reserve Fighter Squadron 541 of Birmingham, Ala., became the first squadron in the Corps to win the "Pete" Ross Safety Trophy by topping 29 other such Marine Reserve units across the nation in flight safety. Brig. Gen. Clayton C. Jerome, Director of Aviation, presented the award to Maj. John H. McEniry, Jr., commanding officer of the squadron.

Marine Ground Control Intercept Squadron 15 was selected as the Corps' best for 1950 and was awarded the coveted Marine Air Reserve Trophy in ceremonies at the Atlanta Naval Air Station. Col. David F. O'Neill, Marine Air Reserve Chief of Staff, presented the award to Lt. Col. Leland W. Smith, former squadron commander, who accepted it on behalf of all the mobilized men of the squadron.

Twice-Wounded Marines

Marine officers and enlisted personnel serving in Korea will be ordered therefrom after having been twice wounded during that campaign, provided each wound was of sufficiently serious nature to require hospitalization in excess of 48 hours, the Marine Corps said.

Such personnel will not be ordered back to service in Korea or to duty with organizations, including ships' detachments, flag allowances, and so forth, which have been actually alerted for a move to the Korean area.

The provisions of the new policy "will be administered on an involuntary basis," the Corps said.

Navy Expands NTTC

Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews disclosed this week that the Navy's Technical Training Center at Jacksonville, Fla., will "eventually be built up to a total on board load of 5,600 students with 1,975 support personnel."

Speaking at an Armed Services Day luncheon on 27 March, during Jacksonville's "Fifty Years of Progress" week, Secretary Matthews also discussed the development of Cecil Field as a master jet field. He said, "This will provide facilities for us to operate our fastest jets with increased efficiency in this locality due to the paralleling of present runways to make dual runways and extending all runways as necessary for jet aircraft."

Other improvements will also be made on the base, he said, and the Navy has assigned additional patrol and carrier squadrons to the Naval Air Station at Jacksonville. He pointed out that "increased operations also will mean that we will have to utilize the naval air stations at Lake City and at Sanford to help carry some of the load."

The War in Korea

recently returned after several months in Korea, told a press conference in Washington that American troops now fighting in Korea ranked with the best soldiers of any army in the history of warfare. He said they were now seasoned veterans, unsurpassed in combat, and greatly superior to the enemy in every way, except in numbers.

Colonel Marshall called attention to an operation last month, during which American troops advanced from Suwon to the Han River. He said our soldiers repeatedly took high ground and then relinquished it voluntarily, only to recapture it on succeeding days after it had been recaptured by the enemy, the sole object being to draw more Chinese Reds into an area where they could be destroyed by our infantry, armor and artillery. In this operation, he said, the Americans lost 60 or 70 killed, but they counted 4,251 enemy dead on the battlefield, probably the greatest disparity of losses ever recorded in any major engagement.

USAF Sets Up New Forces For Training & Engineers

The Air Force this week announced creation of an Aviation Engineer Force under the jurisdiction of the Continental Air Command and a Flying Training Force, commanded by Maj. Gen. Warren R. Carter, USAF, presently Deputy Commander for Flying, Air Training Command.

The Aviation Engineer Force will have headquarters at Wolters AFB, Mineral Wells, Tex. It will conduct all administration, operations and training of aviation engineer units of the Air Force.

Wolters AFB has more than 1,000 military personnel and will expand to approximately 8,500 aviation engineer personnel.

Aviation engineer units are organized, manned, and given initial training by the Army and turned over to the Air Force as units for further training and operations. They maintain their Army identity, but are paid and maintained by the Air Force. They are known as SCARWAF (Special Category, Army, with Air Force) troops and there are several thousand of this type personnel now on duty with the Air Force.

The Flying Training Air Force will be activated 1 May as a component part of the Air Training Command. Plans call for the new headquarters to be located in Waco, Texas.

Air Force officials said that the rapid expansion of the training program throughout the Air Force necessitated the new command set up.

During World War II, these functions were carried out through the operation of three Flying Training Commands designated as the Western, Central and Gulf Coast Flying Training Commands.

Commands Transport Group

Following eight months service in Korea, Col. Glen R. Birchard has resumed command of the 1703d Air Transport Group at Brookley AFB, Ala. During his absence, Col. James R. Haun, deputy commander, was in command.

Third Star for Gen. Kuter

The nomination by President Truman of Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, USAF, to be a lieutenant general recalls that it was three years ago to the month that he was named commander designate of the proposed Military Air Transport Service.

When MATS was activated officially four months later, General Kuter who will be 46 years old on 28 May, was named its commanding general, a post he has held since that time and for which he has gained outstanding recognition, notably in relation to the Berlin Airlift and to the successful air transport operations in Korea.

Air Force officials last year reported to Congress their belief that the Commanding General of MATS should hold three-star rank in view of the far-flung responsibility he holds and the thousands of personnel who are under his command.

In the field of military transport, it is significant to note that this week the President named General Kuter's opposite number for sea transport, Rear Adm. William M. Callaghan, USN, Commander of the Military Sea Transport Service, to be a vice admiral.

The confirmation of General Kuter, a 1927 U. S. Military Academy graduate, as a lieutenant general, together with that of Maj. Gen. Robert W. Harper, Maj. Gen. Richard E. Nugent, Maj. Gen. Earle E. Partridge and Maj. Gen. Otto P. Weyland—all nominated to be lieutenant generals—likely will be held up temporarily. This is because of the fact that the Senate Armed Services Committee has indicated it wants to hold a special hearing on the nomination of Brig. Gen.

Maj. Gen. Kuter

Wallace H. Graham, MC, USAFR, Surgeon to the President, for promotion to the temporary rank of major general. Generally, it is the policy of the Senate to confirm at one time all of the names on a particular list of nominations. As a result, it may be a week or two before the promotions of the five major generals, 10 brigadier generals and 12 colonels, reported in the 17 March issue, are confirmed.

Airmen Promotion Quotas

The Air Force this week announced that its major commands have been authorized to make a total of 18,443 promotions of airmen to non-commissioned grades during April.

At the same time, the normal time-in-grade requirement for advancement to master sergeant was cut from 36 to 24 months and for advancement to technical sergeant from 24 to 18 months. For staff sergeant, the time in grade requirement remains at 12 months, with the former eight months provision for promotion to sergeant still in effect.

Of the 18,443 promotions, 1,400 may be to master sergeant, 1,609 to technical sergeant, 3,474 to staff sergeant and 11,960 to sergeant.

Rename Greenville AFB

Donaldson Air Force Base has been designated as the new name of Greenville AFB, S. C.

The base was renamed in memory of John O. Donaldson of Greenville, a World War I pilot credited with shooting down nine German planes and two balloons. The Greenville, who was the fourth-ranking ace of the war, was killed during an acrobatic exhibition in 1919.

Renaming of Greenville AFB was suggested by USAF to avoid confusion with Greenville AFB in Mississippi and as a means of furthering the objectives of the Air Forces' memorialization program.

By invitation of Col. Louis M. Merrick, Base Commander, the Military Affairs Committee of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce served as a "clearing house" for suggested new names for the base. Emphasis was placed on the names of deceased South Carolinians who achieved outstanding records.

"The Voice With a Smile"

Whenever you pick up the telephone and talk to the operator you know you are going to hear a friendly, cheery voice. For years the telephone operator has been known as "The Voice With a Smile."

But she is ever so much more than that. Alert, intelligent, resourceful and sympathetic in emergencies, she has become the national symbol of efficient attention to the customer's needs. She brings experience and careful training to the job. Hers is the calm, sure speed that comes from knowing how.

In saying a good word for the telephone operator, we would like to say a good word for you too. For it is your courtesy that helps her to be courteous. One good turn has a way of encouraging another. Everybody gets better service when there is co-operation all along the line.

"It is important to realize that the problems of your Army are not only front-page news, here today and gone tomorrow, but they are continuing and vitally significant problems that lie close to the heart of every American."—SECRETARY OF THE ARMY FRANK PACE, JR.

Pay Increases. Soon to be reported to the Senate is a measure granting 17 per cent salary increases to Civil Service employees. Doubtless these higher rates are fully justified. The Senate Committee on Post Office and Civil Services has held extensive hearings and is in possession of the full facts on which to base its recommendations. But one wonders why business and industry and governmental civilian employees are given periodic readjustments in their incomes as living costs increase, but it is virtually generations between adjustments in the pay of the Armed Services. A new compilation by the Civil Service Commission shows that the entrance salaries of classified workers have been increased from 31.3 to 109.7 per cent since 1939—three increases having been voted since 30 June 1945. Since 1945 the cost of living has risen 40.7 per cent. However, from 1908 to 1949 there was no substantial change in the pay rates for commissioned officers of the Armed Services, although some boosts were given the pitifully underpaid enlisted ranks. When the Career Compensation bill was taken up in 1949, the Committee reduced the carefully considered recommendations of the all-civilian Hook commission and then the House further cut these proposals so that as finally enacted the commissioned grades were given base pay increases ranging from 19 to 33 per cent and enlisted from three to 34 per cent. However, even these increases, though far below those given civilian workers, were deceptive, for changes in allowances, flight pay, etc., and the restoration of the full impact of the Federal income tax so lowered net incomes that in many cases the relief was negligible or non-existent. In fact, just before the House approved the bill it was discovered that Air Force major generals and flying Navy rear admirals would suffer a pay reduction so that it was necessary to adjust their flight pay upwards a little to keep them from suffering a loss. In the face of all these facts there seems to be no firm movement to consider the over-all service pay picture. Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex.) is working on a measure to make corrections and readjustments in the Career Compensation bill, but even that seems a long way off, for the Committee has not yet even scheduled it for consideration. The only hope is that when the House finally clears the manpower bill the Committee will take up Mr. Kilday's bill and in its hearings take cognizance of the need for a general upward pay revision.

Army Day, 1951. Despite the Department of Defense's policy against the observance of Service days other than the unified Armed Forces Day, we venture to call attention to the fact that next Friday, 6 April, is the 34th anniversary of the declaration of a state of war with Germany—a day once celebrated by the American people as Army Day. It may be helpful to recall some of the facts. We entered upon that conflict militarily unprepared. It took more than a month to enact a draft law and it was six months before American troops fired their first shot in France. Would Germany have provoked us if we had been ready for war? We think not. Certainly if we had trained forces ready we would not have suffered the 336,800 casualties, 126,000 of them deaths. The seeds of war sown then are still growing. A few days prior to our entry, Czar Nicholas of Russia abdicated and short months later the Russian people came under the reign of bolshevik terror led by Lenin, who, according to Ludendorff's memoirs, had been sent by the German government from Switzerland through Germany and Sweden into Russia for that purpose. There has been no real peace since. The period between World Wars I and II served only as one of rearmament and war preparation for Germany and Soviet Russia while the naive United States and her friends pursued the ways of peace and neglected their security. Today the Army, with the Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force, fights a wearing war for peace in Korea. The lesson for this

Frustrated

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your recent announcement of a new Army policy with respect to temporary promotions on the basis of temporary "time in grade" is disheartening. The promotions during the past year had accomplished a great deal toward straightening out the existing discrepancies between permanent and temporary grades. Now emerges this lamentable plan toward retrogression.

Moreover, it appears that such a policy breaks faith with the legislation of 1947 which sought to integrate new "regular officers" into their proper place on the promotion list according to constructive service criteria, which, based upon the age of 25, initially penalized the internees approximately four years of credit.

Now, after a long and patient wait, a start toward keeping this implied bargain was made in last year's lists only to find that the "eager beavers" are operating to upset the apple cart.

Since forthcoming policy includes a "best qualified" feature, it is inevitable that politics and self-ingratiation will become a favorite hobby of many.

The "Soft Life"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have before me the issue of 3 March in which the Denver Post comes out editorially stating that pay cuts should be given to members of the Armed Services.

I have never felt so insulted in my life. To be a tax-paying member among our nation's citizens and sharing alike the idea that our country is founded on the principle that "all men are created equal," I can find no sound basis for this type of unwarranted reasoning. So, we have a "soft life" in peacetime? Does working long hours, worrying over families when we are forced into long separations, and making unexpected, expensive moves, due to the demands of our job, make for a "soft" life? Evidently the small concessions granted us at Post Exchanges, Ships Stores, and Commissaries, where we are able to attempt to live within our budget, should be Army Day is applicable to the entire defense establishment: temporary month-to-month defense measures are not effective in the present state of world affairs. We must put our security on a long-range basis by promptly enacting, and without any crippling amendments, the Universal Military Training and Service program. We must be prepared at all times to strike promptly with trained ground, sea, and air forces if we are to preserve our freedoms.

There is no longer any doubt that the aircraft carrier, which is a new factor in sea warfare, is an important, if not vital, element of the British sea power in the Mediterranean. If, and when, sufficient members of them become available they will be found to be an indispensable reinforcement of those units which are attempting to protect British shipping in the Atlantic against surface and submarine raiders.

50 Years Ago

What had been expected for some days by the Army officials in Washington came to pass when General Emilio Aguinaldo was captured by General Frederick Funston, U.S.V., with a handful of officers and natives. The news reached Washington by both Army and Navy channels in the shape of two dispatches, one from General MacArthur and one from Admiral Remy, which was an agreeable reminder that from the first to the last of the rebellion the Army and Navy have been in hearty cooperation.

A satisfactory treaty has been made with the representatives of the Minnecongon band of Sioux; the red men bind themselves to keep the peace, not only with us, but with other Indians; they also agree not to infest the routes of travel in this region. Already, people who have been hibernating along the sea coast, waiting for the tardy Spring, are beginning to prepare for projected journeys across the Plains, and to count up the chances of scalping. One protection will be offered in the way of liberally-posted troops; a second in the conclusion of as many treaties as possible with the Indians.

sufficient without compensation to bring up our children in "the way they should go," if we are to believe this editorial.

I am not feeling that I am sacrificing life, time, or money by being in the Service. I only feel that here can I give to my country a small repayment for the many benefits that it has endowed me with. Gladly, not without some misgivings for the welfare and security of my loved ones, would I pack and leave tomorrow for the far corners of the globe if I thought it would benefit the aims of peace.

AF Policy Questioned

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Air staff message AFPMG 41031, dated 21 February 1951, states in part as follows:

"... The cases of Reserve Officers who enter on EAD subsequent to 7 February 1951 and who are eligible for promotion UP AFR 45-5, as amended, and are recommended by their Unit Commanders prior to the date of entry on EAD will be processed to completion regardless of whether or not the individuals concerned are on EAD at the time of completion. . . . Officers promoted in the USAFR subsequent to entry on EAD will be reported to Hq USAF for immediate AFUS promotion to equal grade. . . ."

It is interesting to note that the Air Force is concerned in giving recalled reserve officers AFUS grades equal to their USAFR grades, regardless of the fact that promotion to such USAFR grade occurs after entry on extended active duty. What about the hundreds of reserve officers who have served continuously on EAD since the war and who hold higher grades in the USAFR than those in which currently serving? Many of these officers would have received terminal leave promotions if they had separated at the end of the war, and some could return to active duty with still a second USAFR promotion—in other words, would have been rewarded with two promotions for quitting the service.

How long is it to be the policy of the Air Force to penalize reserve officers who remained on active duty and kept abreast of the newer developments of the service?

THE foreign ministers of 21 American republics, meeting in Washington this week, considered means for promoting hemispheric solidarity against the threat of Communism. The conference was called for the purpose of strengthening the military and economic defenses of the Americas. It was emphasized that aggressive Communism not only menaces external security, but through subversion also threatens internal security.

In welcoming the foreign ministers President Truman said that Soviet expansion is a deadly danger to the whole New World. He warned that if "Soviet subversion and Soviet armed force" should conquer Western Europe "the consequences for all of us in the western hemisphere would be disastrous."

On behalf of the visiting statesmen Foreign Minister Joao Neves de Fontoura of Brazil assured the President that the Latin-American republics are alert to the menace of Communism. He said that "the free nations of the world will have to get together and strengthen themselves for the common defense, or they will perish under the terror of a sinister imperialism."

The Brazilian diplomat intimated that the countries of Central and South America would expect the United States to aid them after the defense emergency has passed, rather than abruptly ending such help, as happened in 1945 after the close of World War II. This was taken to mean that the smaller republics would continue their co-operation, but that the major economic and military burden would have to be borne by the United States.

► SECRETARY OF STATE DEAN ACHESON, in his keynote speech, outlined several proposals for strengthening the military and economic unity of the hemisphere. These and other suggestions and resolutions will be considered by appropriate technical committees. Mr. Acheson proposed that plans be prepared for a co-ordinated defense of the western world, that fullest use be made of available machinery for peaceful settlement of inter-American disputes, and that methods be developed for supporting the United Nations in dealing with aggression.

Mr. Acheson urged that where necessary, improvements be made in procedures for dealing with subversion and other forms of indirect Communist aggression, and that practical steps be taken to protect and strengthen basic democratic institutions. The Secretary said that joint economic forces should be concerted for the common defense, and proposed that emergency measures be taken to increase production of essential materials. Strenuous joint efforts should be made, he said, to keep inflationary tendencies under control.

Just prior to the opening of the conference President Juan Peron of Argentina made the rather startling announcement at Buenos Aires that his government had found a new, more efficient, and much less expensive way to develop atomic energy, and intimated that in doing so his scientists had learned much about the hydrogen bomb, which, however, he said would not be produced in that country.

The announcement was received with skepticism in United States official and scientific circles. Doubt was expressed that work in the development of nuclear energy had developed beyond laboratory experimentation. Such information as was made available tended to confirm this supposition. It appeared that the new method, so triumphantly announced by President Peron, involved nuclear fusion, rather than fission, and that its practicability was still to be proved. It was regarded as significant that the announcement was made on the eve of the inter-American conference, and it may have been so timed in order to enhance Argentine prestige at the meeting. It has also been suggested that it may have been designed to divert world attention from the widely criticized action of the Peron government in seizing the forthright and influential anti-Peron newspaper, La Prensa.

► PRESIDENT VINCENT AURIOL of France was warmly welcomed to the nation's capital this week. He is scheduled to address a joint session of Congress next week, and he has been invited to address the inter-American conference of foreign ministers. The latter invitation was unanimously extended after Guatemala had been persuaded to withdraw its objections, which were based on the ground that the conference should be strictly limited to American affairs.

With the arrival of President Auriol comes word from France that the widespread disruption of transportation in that country has ended. The tie-up resulted from a strike of transport workers for more pay. The work stoppage was not due primarily to Communist influence, but the Reds attempted to profit by the general labor discontent. The strike was settled when the Queuille government agreed to a modest advance in the minimum wage scale.

In Indo-China French troubles were renewed by a sudden outburst of activity by the long-quiet Viet Minh Communist rebels, who swarmed down from mountain jungles in the north to attack the Tonkin delta outposts. While the assaults were repulsed with heavy Red losses, the outbreak appeared to signal the resumption of large-scale fighting in this insurrection-torn country. It was announced that substantial French reinforcements would soon be sent to Indo-China.

The United States Senate this week continued its debate on the highly controversial troops-for-Europe issue. Voting will start next week on several amendments to the pending resolution, authorizing the dispatch, with reservations, of additional American troops to Europe to join General Dwight D. Eisenhower's international force for the defense of Western Europe.

In the fourth week of the preliminary meeting of the deputy foreign ministers of Great Britain, France, the United States and Russia to prepare the agenda for a subsequent Big-Four conference, a change in attitude by the Soviet Union gave some promise that an agreement might be reached. Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, dropped his insistence that the demilitarization of Germany based on the Potsdam agreement be made the prime matter for consideration at the later meeting of foreign ministers.

The Soviet diplomat for the first time agreed that German disarmament might be included in a discussion of the general level of arms of the conferees, rather than as a separate topic. This development caused a change from extreme pessimism to cautious optimism as to the outcome of the meeting. The new Soviet proposal is under study at western capitals.

► Economy Act Injustice—The Comptroller General this week turned thumbs down on a Senate bill (S. 910) designed to correct an injustice suffered by commissioned officers of the Armed Services during the economy era of the early thirties. The bill would restore to officers the pay lost between 1 July 1932 and 30 June 1934 by those officers who were advanced in pay period or rank and failed to benefit thereby because of the Economy Act. The Comptroller General told the Senate Armed Services Committee that the proposal is discriminatory and that there is no substantial basis for its enactment at this time. The Department of Defense has also been asked to comment on the bill but it has not yet responded.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Retired Personnel and Income Tax—The introduction in the Senate of legislation (by Senator Lehman (D-L-N. Y.) and four of his colleagues) to provide a special $600 annual income tax exemption for all military personnel on active duty has evoked comment as to the need for remedial legislation in the matter of income tax payments assessed against retired personnel of the Armed Forces. As was pointed out in a recent editorial in THE JOURNAL (24 Feb.), there is ample precedent for special income tax exemptions, such as the $600 a year provided for persons upon attainment of the age of 65 and the $600 allowed a taxpayer who is blind.

A further study of the matter of income tax paid by retired persons shows that members of the Armed Forces, when retired, are taxed much more severely than are persons retired under the Railroad Retirement Act. This law stipulates that no annuity or pension payment under the Railroad Retirement Act shall be taxable under any circumstances whatsoever.

Similarly, the Social Security Act language bars the Government from collecting income tax on these payments.

However, with regard to retired military personnel, retirement benefits, except for the percentage of physical disability incurred while in active service, are subject to tax. Thus, retirement benefits for long active service, including legal disability by reason of old age or by earlier infirmities after prolonged service, are subject to taxation.

Since military personnel with long service are not eligible for Social Security benefits, it is apparent that the civilian worker has a marked advantage in the matter of income tax exemptions in comparison to persons in retired status. And the sweeping exemptions given to railroad personnel are certainly ample precedent for exempting all retired military pay, the enactment of which legislation has been a long-standing item on THE JOURNAL's priority list.

Of interest also in the matter of inequity to retired military personnel is the fact that while the Federal government does exempt physical disability benefits from taxation, many States levy a tax on this payment, although they cannot levy this tax against retired pay under the Railroad Retirement Act.

It is apparent that among the other discriminatory laws affecting retired military personnel, discussed in recent issues of THE JOURNAL, the matter of income tax exemptions needs to be reviewed by Congress.

With regard to our past articles on retired personnel, THE JOURNAL regrets a partial error in the 17 March issue, which stated that the dual employment limit does not apply to non-Regular officers. Unfortunately, this restrictive ban on Government employment of retired military personnel does apply to most non-Regular retired personnel.

With certain exceptions, it is pointed out, all retired members of the Regular components receiving compensation of $2,500 are prohibited from appointment to or from holding other "office" (receipt of retired pay is considered holding office) to which compensation is attached. This is set forth in an Act of 31 July 1894 (5 U. S. Code 62). The 1894 legislation has never been repealed.

The Comptroller General, on 17 Dec. 1948, held in a pertinent decision that Reserve component retired personnel, as such, do not hold "Federal office" in the application of 5 U. S. Code 62, cited above, relative to the matter of holding "another" Federal office with salary in excess of $2,500.

But in the same decision, the Comptroller General held that commissioned officers of the Reserve components retired lists are included within the prohibitions of Section 212 of the Economy Act of 30 June 1932 (5 U. S. Code 59A), which limits retired pay when holding Federal office or position.

"The Red Army Can Be Beaten"—Of interest to Service personnel is the feature article in the current (10 April) issue of Look magazine, in which authors Garrett Underhill and Ronald Schiller warn that "fear of the Soviet Army, if it prevails, could lead unwittingly to the very thing we seek to avoid—the Soviet conquest of the world." They assert that many Americans are being misled by the myth that Russia's ground forces are too powerful to be beaten; that Russia has an overwhelming reserve of manpower; and that "she could swallow us up in the vast reaches of her territory."

Concluding their analysis, the authors state: "We are vastly superior to Russia industrially and intellectually; there is no reason why we cannot be her master militarily."

Commands V Corps Signal Bn.—Lt. Col. Charles E. Robertson has assumed duties as commanding officer of the 322d Signal Battalion, V Corps, Ft. Bragg, N. C. Formerly, he was assigned to the Army Language School, Monterey, Calif. Colonel Robertson was graduated in 1943 from the Signal Corps Officer Candidate School.

Army Field Forces—Maj. Gen. William B. Kean visited Ft. Monroe, Va., on 27 March in connection with his new assignment as Commander of the III Corps at Camp Roberts, Calif., and Maj. Gen. Roscoe B. Woodruff visited OCAFF 28 March in connection with his new assignment as Commander of the XV Corps at Camp Polk, La.

Lt. Col. Leon O. Pond has been assigned to the Infantry Branch, Training Section, OCAFF. Colonel Pond participated in the Rome-Arno, Northern Appennine and Po Valley Campaigns in World War II under General Mark W. Clark's command. Prior to his Fort Monroe assignment, Colonel Pond was a student at the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va.

Lt. Col. John H. Byrd has been assigned to the Replacement and Mobilization Branch, G3, Training Section, OCAFF. Prior to entering the service, Colonel Byrd was the director of the Oklahoma City Home Builders Association and a member of the American Institute of Architects.

Too Fat To Fly—The Air Force has issued a new medical directive, AFR 160-10, which declares that overweight officers on flying status will be grounded until they lose the extra poundage. When an officer is found overweight, he will be placed on a diet by a flight surgeon. The regulation provides that a continued condition of overweight could result in "severe measures" against offenders.

Build New Division—Earlier this month, THE JOURNAL reported the strength of the newly activated 1st Armored Division at Ft. Hood, Tex., as consisting of one man—Brig. Gen. Bruce C. Clark, USA, Commanding General. This week, General Bruce estimated that the division would reach full strength by June, with the first troops to fill the ranks scheduled to arrive at Ft. Hood beginning 10 April.

The first and only battalion already assigned to the division is the 81st Reconnaissance Battalion, under command of Maj. Morris Jaffee. During World War II, the 81st also was part of the 1st Armored Division. Other units now being organized are: 501st Military Police Company, 501st Replacement Company, 141st Armored Signal Company, 123d Armored Ordnance Maintenance Battalion, 100th Heavy Tank Battalion, 1st Quartermaster Battalion, Headquarters and Headquarters Company First Armored Division.

Flight Nurse Transferred—Maj. Mary E. Hoadley, Chief Nurse, Flight Nurse course, Gunter branch of the School of Aviation Medicine, Gunter AFB, Ala., has left for an overseas assignment. With 18 months overseas as Chief Nurse with the 822d Air Evacuation Squadron to her credit during World War II, Major Hoadley served in Newfoundland, the Azores, Scotland, and France. She has been with the School of Aviation Medicine since 1946. Pending arrival of a replacement, Capt. Ethel R. Kovach will act as Chief Nurse for the Gunter school.

Infantry Center Notes—Lt. Col. Howard F. Haberman has been appointed commanding officer of the new Second Student regiment at the Infantry Center, Ft. Benning, Ga.

Maj. Carl J. Roeser recently was designated by the Tactical Air command, Langley AFB, Va., as air liaison officer with the Fourth Infantry division.

Bridge Built Quickly—A pontoon bridge spanning the Pukhan river in Korea was completed recently in seven hours and 50 minutes and Capt. Thomas W. Justin, commanding officer of C Company, U. S. Army 151st Combat Engineer Battalion, has challenged other bridge-building outfits in Korea to better the time. The task was accomplished by combined efforts of the 151st and the 58th Treadway Bridge Company. The fact that the 151st, a National Guard unit from northern Alabama, had never built this type of bridge before makes the feat all the more amazing.

The men of the 58th Treadway intermingled with members of the 151st to act as instructors and to take part in the actual construction of the bridge. Col. Emerson C. Itshner, I Corps engineer, witnessed the whole operation. After being the first to cross the bridge, he said: "I wouldn't have expected an experienced engineer company to have made the bridge operational in less than 24 hours." Length of the bridge, including approaches, is 497 feet. The floating portion, made up of 32 pontoons, totals 396 feet.

Air Officer Assigned To Armored Division—Maj. Dallas W. Webb, an Air Force officer assigned to the Tactical Air Command at Langley AFB, Va., has been attached to the Army's 2d Armored Division at Ft. Hood, Tex. Major Webb will be tactical air liaison officer to the division. His presence with the division will result in closer coordination and maximum employment of air support for ground troops.

Atomic Propulsion of Aircraft—The Atomic Energy Commission has authorized negotiation of a contract with the Aircraft Gas Turbine Divisions of General Electric Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, for the further development of a nuclear reactor for aircraft. The nuclear reactor development will parallel the development of associated propulsion devices for which the Air Force has previously announced contract negotiations with General Electric.

Double Air Strength At Army School—The arrival last week of an L-19 liaison plane at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., has doubled the "Air Force" at the Ordnance School. The new plane will be a companion to the Y1-15 observation plane which in January became the first official aircraft assigned exclusively to the Ordnance School.

No Navy Medals for Frostbite—The Navy notified its commanders this week that frostbite is not to be considered as a qualification for the award of the Purple Heart.

Regulations provide that the medal may be awarded for a wound (defined in the regulations as "an injury to any part of the body from an outside force, element, or agent) sustained as a hostile act of the enemy or while in action in face of the enemy. The Army awards the Purple Heart for frostbite, but the Air Force and Marine Corps follow the Navy policy.

An Executive Order signed in 1942 by former President Roosevelt states that the regulations of the various services shall "be of uniform application" so far as practicable.

French Cruiser at U. S. N. A.—The French Training Cruiser, Jeanne d'Arc, anchored off the U. S. Naval Academy 28 March. The ship is on an eight month training cruise for French Midshipmen and student officers. The Cruiser, under the command of Capt. Guillaume de Toulouse-Lautrec, has a complement of 37 officers, 126 student Ensigns, and 405 enlisted crew members.

The arrival of the French Cruiser coincided with the arrival of His Excellency M. Vincent Auriol, President of France, on 30 March. The President visited the Academy on that date, and presented the Academy with the Croix de La Legion D'Honneur and the Croix de Guerre, with Palms. The French student officers from the cruiser took part in the presentation ceremony, and witnessed the full dress review by the U. S. Midshipmen in honor of President Auriol.

Busiest Days for ARS—In its largest two day operation of the Korean War, helicopters of the USAF 3d Air Rescue Squadron evacuated 148 wounded and injured paratroopers, who jumped in Korea on 23 March. Flying under intense mortar and small arms fire, the helicopters flew 77 sorties. Two H-5 helicopters were damaged by enemy fire, but were able to continue the mission. Statistics include until midnight 25 March.

Going into action for the first time, the new H-19 ten-place helicopter flew two sorties, evacuating 15 men. The other sorties were made by the smaller H-5 helicopter, which has been used extensively by Air Rescue Service in Korea, and which can carry a total of only four persons.

The Sikorsky H-19, recently flown to Japan by the Air Proving Ground aboard a Douglas C-124 cargo plane, is undergoing operational service tests in Korea. The H-19 is larger than the H-5 helicopter now being used by MATS Air Rescue Service, which is the only Air Force organization flying helicopters in Korea. H-5s of the 3d Air Rescue Squadron there have evacuated or rescued more than 1,100 persons (as of 20 March) from front line positions or from behind enemy lines. Other Rescue aircraft including Grumman SA-16s amphibians, Boeing SB-17s and the L-5 liaison planes have brought the total number of 3d Air Rescue evacuations and rescues to 1,234 persons, as of 20 March.

Named Air Inspector—Col. John S. Chalfant a deputy group commander with the Eighth Air Force in World War II, has been named Air Inspector of the First Air Force at Mitchel AFB, N. Y. Colonel Chalfant served as professor of air science and tactics at Kansas State College, in charge of the Air Force ROTC program there, before being assigned to First Air Force headquarters.

Official AF Flag—General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, has approved an official flag for the Air Force. The flag carries the Air Force seal on a dark blue background. The seal has a brown American eagle with outspread wings above a white and sky blue shield. Inset at the top of the shield is a gold thunderbolt and shafts of lightning. Encircling the eagle and shield are 13 stars representing the original 13 colonies. The new flag was shown for the first time officially in the parade held here to honor President Vincent Auriol of France.

Marine Band Story—"The President's Musical Marines," will march through the pages of The Saturday Evening Post on 14 April in full color. Post writer, Henry Pringle, will explain the history of the 152 year old Marine Band, the versatility of the bandmen, how the Presidents' musical tastes affected the band library and the "internal workings" of the world-famous musical organization. The color pictures, showing various activities of the Marine Bandmen, were made by Post photographer Frank Ross.

Chaplain's Charges Refuted—The Department of the Army this week took issue with a statement made by Lt. Comdr. Otto E. Sporrer, a Naval chaplain, to the effect that some 400 soldiers of the 7th Division simulated wounds and injuries in order to be flown out of the battle area near the Chosen reservoir last November. The Navy chaplain identified himself as the author of an anonymous article in a west coast magazine that was highly critical of the Army and highly favorable to the Marines, with whom the author served.

At a press conference in Washington Col. S. L. A. Marshall, who recently returned from Korea where he served as an operations analyst, outlined the action in North Korea and refuted the statements attributed to Chaplain Sporrer. He said that two battalions of the 7th Division had been overrun by greatly superior numbers of the enemy and suffered very heavy losses. They were serving under Marine Corps command at the time. Colonel Marshall said that both soldiers and Marines served with great distinction in this battle, and only those judged by the surgeons as seriously wounded or frozen were flown out of the area.

Brig. Gen. John C. McQueens, USMC, of Marine headquarters in Washington, was present at Colonel Marshall's press conference, and said that the Marine Corps deplored inter-Service bickering. A Navy spokesman said that the statements attributed to Chaplain Sporrer had not been cleared with the Navy Department and were not in conformance with regulations. He gave it as his opinion that an official investigation would be made.

Decorate 1st Cavalry Officer—The Silver Star and two Bronze Oak Leaf Clusters for the same medal have been awarded a 1st Cavalry Division staff officer for gallantry in action against the enemy on three separate occasions last fall while fighting north of the 38th Parallel. Recipient of the three awards is Lt. Col. Paul T. Clifford, G-1 (Personnel and Administration Officer) on the staff of Maj. Gen. Charles D. Palmer, division commander. Colonel Clifford was an infantry battalion commander within the division during the actions which prompted the awards. The first action—basis for the Silver Star award—occurred on 13 Oct., near Kumchon. The second took place 19 Oct., near Pyongyang. The third resulted from an incident 28 Nov., near Samso-ri.

Army Combat Ratio

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr. this week answered repeated criticism regarding the ratio of support troops to combat personnel as he told an audience in Boston, Mass., that nearly half of the military personnel of the Army are now in actual combat units.

Secretary Pace declared that "even before Korea, in spite of our limited strength and our high diversified responsibilities all over the world, we were able to keep 38 per cent of our military personnel in actual combat units."

He noted that of the approximately 750,000 men added to the Army since Korea, nearly 70 per cent are going into combat or combat support units. He said that recently a 3 per cent reduction in non-fighting personnel made an additional 20,000 men available for combat jobs and reported that "we hope to free another 20,000 by hiring more civilians for certain rear-area jobs."

Secretary Pace explained at the annual Armed Forces and Veterans banquet of the Brotherhood Temple Ohabei Shalom in Boston that "it is obviously fallacious to try to arrive at a division slice, or the number of troops required to support a division in combat, by dividing the total number of people in the Army by the number of divisions. Yet, this has been done," the Secretary declared.

Mr. Pace related that a great many combat units are not included in divisions. He said many so-called "non-combat" units are in immediate support of field armies, "ready, willing and able to fight, which they frequently do, while carrying out their specialized functions." He added that at any given time, about 20 per cent of the total Army strength is either in training or in transit.

During his address, Secretary Pace paid tribute to military leadership in Korea, where he said that "in the present team of General MacArthur and General Ridgway we have in my opinion one of the finest field combinations this country has ever seen."

Mr. Pace said that "from Pentagon to foxhole, from the Sergeant's stripes to the General's stars, the Army's leadership has been outstandingly effective."

Concluding, he said: "I place no limits on the pride we can feel today in the American soldier as he has performed in Korea, and in every echelon of the Army backing him up. We have seen him in action as the best armed, best equipped, best cared for soldier in the world, with the world's best leadership, and displaying a skill and courage that bow to none. He has added new lustre to the tradition of the United States Army which has served this nation so gallantly and unselfishly, at home and throughout the world, for 175 years. He has earned our faith, our confidence and our eternal gratitude."

Guided Missile Center

Bliss is the complex task faced by the Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missile Center today. With training and firing being conducted on a military reservation consisting of more than four and a quarter million acres of drill fields, firing ranges and housing areas, this presents a "large order."

Army Field Forces Board No. 4 has the mission of evaluating all recommendations for development of equipment, preparation of military characteristics for equipment to be developed, and performing users' tests of equipment with respect to antiaircraft artillery and guided missiles.

To carry out this mission, the Board is organized so as to work efficiently and effectively with all interested agencies from the time a particular item is on paper until it has been finally approved as a standard item of equipment or else its non-suitability definitely determined. The scope of the Board's activity includes coordination and cooperation with the various planning agencies of the Armed Forces, the many civilian contractors charged with the manufacture of development items, and with the numerous other testing agencies involved to insure complete coordination of effort.

Another activity at the Center is the Antiaircraft Artillery and Guided Missiles Branch of the Artillery School. The AA and GM Branch is the largest and most complete antiaircraft artillery school in the world and is now training officers and enlisted men from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force, in addition to personnel from other nations.

These selected officers and enlisted men are given practical exercises as well as classroom and laboratory instruction in the tactics and techniques of the employment of antiaircraft weapons and guided missiles against hostile targets on the land, on the sea, and in the air.

the outgrowth of the 1st Guided Missile Battalion, which was established in 1946, now consists of three battalion-sized units conducting simultaneous and successive phases of training.

The first battalion consists of highly-trained personnel with a mission of developing cadre for units of the third battalion, which, in turn, is conducting the service-testing of experimental guided missile weapons. The most highly-trained guided missile specialists will come from the first battalion. The second battalion is composed, for the most part, of personnel who have no previous training in guided missile work. Preliminary guided missile indoctrination and advanced training to provide specialists of the lesser skills and instruction in the use of guided missile training aids is the mission of this battalion.

Newest of the organizations at the AAA and GM Center at Fort Bliss is the Antiaircraft Artillery Replacement Training Center, set up to cope with the training problems emanating from the present expansion of the Armed Forces. New men in the Army are being trained by the Replacement Training Center in much the same fashion established for such centers in World War II. Organized in August 1950, the Replacement Training Center is rapidly expanding to take care of the increasing number of men sent to Fort Bliss for basic and antiaircraft training.

Two Antiaircraft Artillery Brigades, the 102d and 108th, and a number of Groups and Battalions are now at Fort Bliss for their unit training prior to being assigned to a permanent station. These organizations are making use of the drill fields, confidence and infiltration courses, firing ranges, small-arms ranges and other conditioning and training facilities of the AAA and GM Center to fit them to take their place with other units of the Armed Forces.

"Flying Schoolhouse"

A "Flying Schoolhouse" version of the Superfortress was unveiled at Seattle on 25 March with delivery to the Air Force by Boeing Airplane Company of the first TB-50D navigator-bombardier trainer.

The new airplane, an extensively modified B-50, will be used in training new "triple-threat" crewmen who will serve as combined bombardier-navigator-radar operators on high-speed jet bombers such as the 600-mile-an-hour B-47 Stratojet.

The TB-50 is the first postwar four-engine bomber to be equipped for specialized combat training of this type. Officers assigned to training for the new crew position on high-speed bombers will receive practical instruction in the TB-50's before graduating to actual operational squadrons.

Delivered to the Bombing School at Mather AFB, Calif., the TB-50D and its sisterships will form the nucleus for a new course at the school which is expected to turn out 650 officer-students each year. The triple-purpose officers are designated simply as navigator-bombardier "1037's" by the Air Force, this being the number assigned to the ambidextrous crew member.

The swept-wing B-47 Stratojet, for instance, uses a flight crew of only three men, compared with a normal combat crew of eleven men for the B-29 or B-50.

The TB-50D's (the "T" prefix denotes Trainer) have normal flight crew stations in the forward section, plus provisions for two student navigators and one instructor. The rear bomb bay is sealed and used for installation of a large portion of the electronic equipment used in training. The rear crew compartment, formerly used as the central fire control station for the Superfort's gun turrets, now contains installations for one instructor and two student radar system operators. Each trainee's station has a complete set of equipment including radar scope, controls, switches and instruments for his particular duty.

Air Force Tests Scorpions

Production models of Scorpion F-89 twin-jet fighters are now in use at Edwards Air Force Base, operated by the Air Materiel Command in the Southern California desert, and at the Air Proving Ground at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., where tests are now in progress.

At Edwards the Northrup-built F-89s are being flown in accelerated service tests, during which as much time as would ordinarily be covered in six months' operation is being flown in a few weeks. At the same time, additional F-89s are being shaken down in tactical suitability tests at Eglin, where the pilots are flying them through maneuvers simulating combat conditions.

The night-and-day flights at Edwards involve extensive tests of previously-established specifications. Data gathered in the Edwards tests will be used to improve successive models. Each airplane must log 150 hours of flight time during the tests, the AMC disclosed.

Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter recently announced the Scorpion had been ordered into production as the new standard all-weather interceptor.

Actual performance details on the F-89 are still being withheld by the USAF, although the plane is announced as being in the 600-miles-an-hour class, capable of operating at more than 40,000 feet altitude. If necessary it can operate on only one of its two Allison turbojet engines, which are equipped with power-boosting afterburners. Current models are armed with six 20-mm cannon and equipped with radar search gear to locate targets in any kind of weather.

Project Officer at Air Plant

Lt. Col. S. E. Cleveland has been appointed Field Project Officer in charge of the Fairchild-Kaiser C-119 project according to recent orders received from Maj. Gen. Orval R. Cook, USAF, Director of USAF Procurement and Industrial Planning.

In addition to his duties at the Fairchild Aircraft Division as Air Force plant representative, Colonel Cleveland will supervise the transfer of technical information and manufacturing know-how between Fairchild and the Kaiser-Frazer Corporation. The USAF office at the Fairchild plant in Hagerstown, Md., will serve as a central clearing agency for all matters except fiscal and contractual which require reference to governmental agencies.

A pilot since 1919 with more than 8,000 hours of flying time, Colonel Cleveland has had a full career in both commercial and military aviation. Following his early barnstorming days he served as an airline captain and later technical advisor and test pilot for several aircraft manufacturers. In 1942 he was given a direct commission in the Air Force, eventually ending his World War II duties as commanding officer of a troop carrier unit in Panama assigned to the 6th Air Force.

Prior to his assignment as Air Force Plant Representative at Fairchild in July 1948, Colonel Cleveland was stationed with the Air Force at Mobile, Ala.

Hiring of Reservists

Hiring and promotion of reservists and draft eligibles, with no distinction because of prospective military service, is reported by nearly three-fourths of employers answering a spot survey conducted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Out of 109 companies responding, 81 said they follow the same hiring and promotion practices for reservists as for any other persons, and 76 made the same statement regarding potential selectees.

Virtually all companies replied they were currently hiring and promoting both reservists and those facing the draft. Five companies reporting they were not hiring reservists and seven not taking on draft eligibles said they were hiring few new employees at all.

With only one exception, no company indicated a fixed policy of giving others preference in recruiting or promotion over reservists or draft eligibles. Many replied that where any consideration is given to military status, it is usually in the case of imminent call or when a long job training period is required.

The Chamber made the survey following adoption of a declaration by its Board of Directors urging employers to lend their support in providing members of the reserves equality of employment and promotion opportunity pending any call to active duty.

Dunlap C. Clark, president of Central Bank, Oakland, Cal., chairman of the Chamber's National Defense Committee, in a foreword to the Chamber's summary, said:

"It is heartening to note, based on this spot survey, that so many employers are recognizing their responsibilities to those eligible for military service. The companies granting such recognition are commended. Others are urged to follow this patriotic practice to assure such men equal employment and promotion opportunity."

Traffic Service Director

Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall has announced the appointment of Kenneth L. Vore to be Director of the Military Traffic Service in the Office of the Secretary.

Since 15 Oct. 1950 Mr. Vore had served as a consultant to E. G. Plowman, whom he succeeds as Director. Mr. Plowman, who is on leave from his duties as a vice president of the United States Steel Corporation, will continue to serve the Secretary of Defense as a special consultant in military traffic matters.

Until last October when he came to the Department of Defense, Mr. Vore had served as director of transportation for the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. He is a graduate of the University of Southern California where he majored in transportation and economics.

New Tank Beats Schedule

Three months and four days ahead of contract schedule, the first production-line Walker Bulldog tank rolled from the Cleveland, Ohio Tank Plant on 27 March and was presented to Under Secretary of the Army Archibald S. Alexander.

The Army-owned Cleveland plant is operated by the Cadillac Division of General Motors Corporation.

Commenting on the addition of the new tank, Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., said:

"The T-41 Walker Bulldog is the first completely new tank to be built by the Army since World War II. It is a fast, maneuverable vehicle, classed as 'light' because of its 26-ton overall weight, and its cavalry and reconnaissance mission. Its punch is in a new high muzzle velocity 76-mm gun. On the basis of present knowledge we think it will out-fight, out-gun and out-maneuver anything of its class in the world, and its armor provides maximum crew protection for vehicles of this class."

"This tank," Mr. Pace said, "was designed by the Army and production engineered by the engineering staff of Cadillac. Both the Army Ordnance Corps and Cadillac have accomplished and are accomplishing a magnificent job. This tank demonstrates again the defense production miracles America can perform through cooperation between private industry and its Armed Forces, and it also points up again the Army's and the Nation's determination to provide American fighting men with the best weapons possible."

When Cadillac was told by the Army to go ahead with T-41 production last August, the company's first big job at the plant site in Cleveland was to move several tons of beans being stored by the Department of Agriculture in the otherwise empty stand-by plant. As beans were moved out, machines were moved in, workers were employed and trained or retrained, and the assembly lines were laid out.

The Army contract, based on past experience, set a target date of 1 July for initial production. By August or September production will reach its peak.

Several test models of the T-41 have been produced at the Army's Detroit Arsenal. One of these was demonstrated for President Truman at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., 17 Feb. It was then that the tank was named for the late General Walton H. Walker, who was killed last December while he commanded the Eighth Army in Korea.

Text of Address

The following is the text of Under Secretary Alexander's address at the Cleveland ceremonies.

"We are proud to welcome into the Army what we believe is the world's finest light tank, the Walker Bulldog. Our country should be proud of this tank and of the record achieved in initiating its production."

"First, a word about the speed with which production has started. This huge Cleveland plant was built toward the end of World War II for the construction of heavy bombers. After the war, we turned, we hoped for good, to peaceful pursuits, and this plant became a storage shed for the Department of Agriculture. It housed thousands of tons of beans. Meanwhile, learning from the World War II experience, the Army had developed a mobilization program under which we had worked with Cadillac so that if necessary light tank production could begin with minimum delay. Then came the communist attack in Korea. And in August, a little more than seven months ago, the Army called upon Cadillac to make the light tank here."

"The first mission of that great industrial organization was to move beans. Our production experts in Detroit and in Washington, leaning heavily on past experience and the formidable sight of those great stacks of beans, gave Cadillac a target date. On 1 July 1951, Cadillac was told, it must present the Army with its first production-made T-41, and by winter its assembly lines must be running at a production peak. Cadillac called in 1380 first sub-contractors in 24 states, and those sub-contractors, in turn, called upon upward to 6000 sub-subcontractors throughout the country. More than half these sub-contracts and probably a similar proportion of the sub-subcontracts, went to small business, that is firms with 500 or less employees."

"We see today the result of this teamwork between large, medium-sized and small American businesses. Three months and 4 days ahead of the contract schedule the Army has its first production T-41 tanks. By August or September, between 3 and 4 months ahead of schedule, the production lines in this plant will be at their peak on the present contract."

"This is a wonderful record. On behalf of the Secretary of the Army and every man in it, I congratulate and thank each of you who has helped achieve this record. It is a fine achievement, of which each of you may be proud, the men of Army Ordnance, the men and women who work for Cadillac and for its suppliers and subcontractors. What you have done is typical of what this country can do when aroused."

"That brings me to certain conclusions to be drawn from this event today. They are conclusions which I think our friends abroad and our potential foes should consider. Since they can't all be here, I hope that this event and its significance will be accurately conveyed abroad. My conclusions are: first that we do have an excellent new light tank, with gun and maneuverability and speed and the other characteristics needed in the light tank, all I believe the best there is today. Second is the fact that our country has been able to get these into production in such a short time. Third and most important is the fact that both the resolution to have this new tank and the ability to produce it indicate the frame of mind of this country. The American people, like the people in every other country, pray for peace. Our government also desires peace. But our people and our government are now aroused to the danger abroad from aggressive intention combined with large armaments. The production of this tank so soon shows that we have not lost, but rather increased our skills and that we have regained our determination. It now remains for us to continue resolutely and calmly to build the arms and armament capacity necessary for defense."

AIR FORCE VETERINARIANS

At the present time there are 160 veterinary officers on duty with the USAF Medical Service. It is expected that by June 1951 25% of the regular officers will hold the Masters Degree in Public Health.

Secy. Marshall Concerned

building up of a strong and efficient National Guard.

So far as available trained manpower was concerned, the Secretary said, the country was in a state of bankruptcy last June and July, when the Korean conflict began. Now we have just begun to get an available number of soldiers through basic training, the Secretary said. This month, for the first time since the Korean conflict began, the Secretary pointed out, we have enough graduates from basic training to meet current commitments.

Relief of Reserves

To enable the relief of reserves, particularly in hardship cases, Secretary Marshall said, we will have to have more men, and especially trained men. Under the present program, if continued, there will be sufficient trained men each month to provide necessary replacements and to start the relief of reserve personnel.

The Secretary was asked concerning a statement made by Senator Robert A. Taft (R-Ohio) that he understood the military authorities were planning a force of 15 divisions for European service, instead of the six previously announced. Secretary Marshall said that as Secretary of Defense he had never heard of such a proposal.

Secretary Marshall said that money provided for the armed forces by the regular and first and second supplemental appropriations bills would be largely exhausted next month and additional funds would be requested in a third supplemental appropriations bill. The amount, he said would be about $10 billion, which would provide not only for pay and rations for the forces which were mobilized faster than had been previously estimated, but also for munitions and equipment, in order to keep manufacturing plants in operation and the flow of materials going uninterrupted to the forces. He said he had been assured by Congressional leaders that there would be no objection to granting these funds.

Gen. Garvin to Return

Maj. Gen. Crump Garvin, USA, who has been Commanding General of the Pusan Base Port Command in Korea, will return to the United States next month to succeed Maj. Gen. Thomas F. Farrell, USA, as Commanding General of the 301st Logistical Command at Camp Rucker, Ala.

General Farrell assigned last month to the Defense Production Administration.

General Garvin, who had been Commanding General of the Yokohama Command, was named to head the Pusan Logistical Command on 27 July 1950 and on 20 Sept. 1950 was made Commanding General of the 2d Logistical Command in Pusan and appointed Commander of the Pusan Base Command. It was while serving in this post that he was made a major general in February of this year.

Open Fitzsimons Housing Units

The first four of 200 families recently moved into new quarters at Fitzsimons Army Hospital in Denver to open officially a $2 million housing project to be known as Fitzsimons Gardens.

The huge project was formally dedicated by Brig. Gen. Harry D. Offutt, USA, Fitzsimons commander, at which time the keys to the first four units were presented to four sergeants. The housing is part of the Wherry housing program for military personnel and upon completion will quarter 200 families. The development, built by the Burns Construction Company of Denver, will be completed by September of this year.

Army Promotion Policy

Corps alike, officers whose dates of rank do not place them in the zone of consideration, provided the number selected outside the zone does not exceed five per cent of the total number promoted. This enables selection boards to recognize competence wherever found.

"Reserve and National Guard officers who have been ordered into active military service since the Korean conflict began, and whose dates of rank on active duty place them in a zone of consideration, will automatically be considered as each individual completes six months of active duty prior to 30 June 1951.

"The authority to make battlefield promotions by a commander in an active combat zone designated by the Department of the Army remains the same.

"Specifically, the Commander-in-Chief, Far East, has been given authority to make battlefield promotions to the grades of lieutenant colonel, major, captain and first lieutenant. Officers must have completed six months in grade to be eligible for a battlefield promotion. For promotion to the grades of lieutenant colonel and major, officers must have demonstrated ability for two months in a position vacancy of the next higher grade in combat, and for promotion to the grades of captain and first lieutenant, for one month in a position vacancy of the next higher grade in combat.

"The Commander-in-Chief, Far East, has also been authorized to submit to the Department of the Army recommendations for battlefield promotion to the grade of colonel, subject to an individual having six months in current grade, and who, for two months, has demonstrated ability while in a position vacancy of the next higher grade. However, the authorization for a selection board to reach down beyond a zone of consideration to select outstanding officers will afford exceptional officers not in combat an opportunity for more prompt recognition.

"Major commanders are authorized to submit recommendations for temporary promotions of officers who meet time-in-grade requirements at any time, and such recommendations will be considered by the selection board.

"Other salient features of the new temporary promotion policies are:

"Any officer serving in the grade of lieutenant colonel who was reduced from the grade of colonel, without cause, due to the grade readjustment program in 1946-47, will be considered for temporary promotion to the grade of colonel.

"Any Reserve or National Guard officer currently serving on active duty in the grade of lieutenant colonel who holds a valid commission as colonel in the Organized Reserve Corps or National Guard will be considered for temporary promotion to the grade of colonel, regardless of date of rank. Similar provisions provide for the consideration of Reserve and National Guard officers for temporary promotion in the grades of major, captain and first lieutenant who are serving in grades lower than their Organized Reserve Corps or National Guard grade, regardless of dates of rank.

"The 'best qualified' method of selection will be used for the selection of officers for promotion to the grade of colonel, and the 'fully qualified' method for promotion to the grade of lieutenant colonel, major and captain.

"The names of those officers who have been selected for promotion will be placed on recommended lists from which promotions will be made from time to time.

"Additional provisions were contained in the new policies regarding temporary promotions from second lieutenant to first lieutenant. The normal time of 18 months' active Federal commissioned service prior to promotion to the grade of first lieutenant is not changed. However, Reserve and National Guard second lieutenants ordered into the active military service may receive partial credit for service in the Active Reserve of the Officers' Reserve Corps or National Guard for temporary promotion. The new policy provides that Reserve or National Guard second lieutenants who complete 18 months' active Federal commissioned service, to include commissioned service performed in Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps or Coast Guard, or a combination of 24 months' active Federal commissioned service and service in the Active Reserve of the Officers' Reserve Corps or National Guard of the United States as a commissioned officer, whichever is completed earlier, may be promoted to the temporary grade of first lieutenant provided they have completed six months' service on current active duty tour.

"The policy further provides that any second lieutenant may be recommended for promotion to the temporary grade of first lieutenant prior to the completion of service outlined above, with selection to be made by a Department of the Army Selection Board, provided he has served continuously on active duty for nine months in the grade of second lieutenant, is outstanding among his contemporaries, and is recommended by a general officer.

"Major commanders are authorized to submit recommendations through channels for temporary promotion of officers who have completed time-in-grade requirements outlined below.

"Officers to be eligible for consideration whose dates of rank on active duty do not place them in the zone must have certain specified times-in-grade. However, time-in-grade in the cases of officers called to active duty will include both Reserve and active duty service. The initial minimum time-in-grade requirements are as follows:

"Promotion to colonel—three years in grade of lieutenant colonel.
Promotion to lieutenant colonel—two years in grade of major.
Promotion to major—two years in grade of captain.
Promotion to captain—two years in grade of first lieutenant.
"Officers previously passed over for temporary promotion will be considered for promotion provided they meet the promotion criteria.

"These policies were adopted after extensive study of current conditions, and it is believed will meet the need for the advancement of the most experienced and outstanding officers and for the early recognition of demonstrated competence.

PROMOTION ZONES

"Under the provisions of Section 515, Public Law 381, 80th Congress, selection boards will be convened in Washington, D. C., to recommend Regular and non-Regular promotion-list-type officers for promotion to the temporary grades of colonel, lieutenant colonel, major and captain. The board for selection of colonels will be convened on or about 2 April 1951, with others to follow as early as practicable.

"Selection lists in order of temporary date of rank in grade in which serving, without regard to component, will be furnished the selection board by The Adjutant General.
